The Veerni Institute

"No country in the world CAN become a successful power on the back of an uneducated populace." Shashi Tharoor

The study found that education in India is far from universal, particularly for girls. 25% have never been to school. 57% have completed 7 years of schooling and 30% have completed secondary education. In Rajasthan where Veerni operates, only 13-18% of young women had completed secondary education.

The girls have best friends – they are happy as it is a new experience for them as there is little time for friendship in their village lives.

This is what they write about friendship:

U from class 8: P is my best friend and she is my role model. She lives in the same room and is my class mate. Her behavior is very nice and she is good at sports and likes to drink dairy milk five star.

P from class 8: She is true to her word. She is honest and humble. She is my best friend. She respects the teacher and she wishes I should progress. I am lucky to have such a good friend. All the teachers love teaching her. She helps the weak and poor students. She helps me very much.

P from class 8. M is my best friend. All the teachers love her. She got many prizes. She is faithful to me. She is honest and humble and her health is good. She is a good speaker and her nature is very nice. I am lucky to have such a good friend.
